Get to know each other.

Colline & Alexis

As oenologists by training, our origins are multiple.
I, Colline, am Breton, Provençal, Savoyard, Italian and Armenian.
You, Alexis, are Parisian, Corsican, Italian and Béarnais.
Our children were born in Angers.

One heritage among others, this stony land in Balagne, on this much-talked-about island of Corsica.
And the desire to develop this place which is dear to us, to take over from your grandmother Hélène and her parents before her.

As agricultural engineers and gourmets, we have an agricultural and gastronomic approach.
So let's see what grows around us... Nepita, Myrtle, Juniper... Rosemary, Immortelle, Oliviers, Lauriers... and citrus fruits are not far away.

The idea is born: in this peaceful place, we will create spirits.

The main thing.

Bloom Soul in a few words.

Bloom Soul is a Corsican organic and artisanal maison de distillations. Founded in 2020 by the oenologist Colline Jullien in the small village of Feliceto, Bloom Soul spirits offers natural and complex flavours. The unique creations of the maison are entirely crafted by its founder.

Colline selects her plants and composes her spirits in her herbalist's workshop. Close to the land and passionate about her work, she considers each distillation a celebration where she puts all her know-how to work to sublimate the aromas.

Bloom Soul's most emblematic product is San Roccu Gin, already valued by the most renowned restaurants in France.

The aniseed

Pado

Named after our ancestors' family name of Padovani, whose Corsican origins were then passed down by women.

Wild fennel is blended with various organically grown Corsican plants for natural sweetness.

Whether you're enjoying your aperitif at Île Rousse or elsewhere, let PADO diluted with chilled water quench your thirst.

The Gin

San Roccu

This hamlet in the foothills of the Corsican mountains is one of our favourite places. Our aim was to take all the flavours and aromas from the very soul of this wild, lively place and share them through this gin.

The result of macerating organically grown Corsican herbs for 24 hours before distilling them in a Stupfler still, this San Roccu gin exhales its subtle aromas of juniper, clementine, myrtle and nepita and produces a fully rounded flavour with a fresh, minty finish.

Enjoy the silence, close your eyes, and you're in San Roccu!

The mentholated one

Feli'geto

"Get" back to nature!
A Corsican herb from the mint family, nepita is organically grown and distilled on its own to bring out all its complexity.

The minty freshness is combined with powerful Laricio pine resin notes and the delicate aromas of white pepper and lemon verbena.
The roundness produced by the Stupfler still is experienced in the mouth, along with a subtle balance between liveliness and sweetness. Breathe in our crisp mountain air!
